

□Heroism was not an invention of the Greeks. Yet, through the first hundreds years of their civilization, the Greek literature has already given birth to highly polished and complex long epics that revolved around heroes. These literature works gave many possibilities of definition of heroism. The Greeks illustrated heroism to obey the rules laid down by the gods and goddesses, and those who obey the rules would gain honor and fame. The Greeks regarded intelligence as one of the highest gifts that all heroes must possess. The Greeks required that all heroes must have courage. Odysseus, one of the heroes of the epic "Odyssey" stands out. He was constantly expected to be a true hero, always obey the rules laid down by the immortals, possess wisdom and courage. □The Greeks believed that all heroes must always obey the Guest/Host relationship rule-- which all guests must treat the hosts with courtesy, and the host must treat the guests properly-- laid down by the gods and goddesses. Those who did not obey the rule would be punished severely. Odysseus throughout the epic demonstrated that he obeyed the Guest/Host relationship rule. Odysseus always following the Guest/Host relationship rule, a characteristic that all heroes must have according to the Greeks' tradition. All heroes must follow the rule because if they did not, they would be punished by the immortals, and would not be recognized as heroes. When Odysseus reaches the land of the Cyclops race. Odysseus decided to pick his best men, goods offered as gifts, and headed toward a Cyclops's cave. When his men saw cheese, pens, and lamb on lying on the racks, they pleading to Odysseus, "Why not take these cheeses, get them stowed, come back, throw all the pens, and make a run for it? We'll drive the kids and lambs aboard. We say put out again on good salt water!" Odysseus dismissed the suggestion, "I wished to see the cave man, and what he had to offer." Odysseus dismissed the suggestion of his men, and choose to wait to greet the Cyclops with the gifts as in the custom of the Guest/Host relationship rule. Those actions and sayings showed that Odysseus was always following Guest/Host relationship rule, an example for his men to look up to. Odysseus's actions spoke for his character. He possesses the characteristic that meets the criteria of always obeying the rules laid down by the immortal as defined in the Greek's tradition of all true heroes. □The Greeks believed that intelligence was one of the highest gifts that all heroes must possess. Intelligence was so important to the character of all heroes because intelligence would be used in novel situations where cunning would most be needed. Odysseus possesses intelligence as expected in the Greeks' tradition of heroes. Odysseus displayed intelligence when he went to the goddess Circe to rescue his men who were turned into swine by the goddess Circe. The goddess spoke to him, "Put up your weapon in the sheath. We two shall mingle and make love upon our bed. So mutual trust may come of play and love." He was asked to go to bed with a beautiful goddess, and yet he responded, "Circe, am I a boy, that you should make me soft and doting now? Here in this house you turned my men to swine; now it is I myself you hold, enticing into your chamber; to your dangerous bed, to take my manhood when you have me stripped. I mount no bed of loved with you upon it. Or swear to me first a great oath, if I do, you will work no more enchantment to my harm." She swore at once, outright, as I demanded, and after she had sworn, and bound herself, I entered Circe's flawless bed of love." Odysseus was asked by the goddess Circe to make love with her in order to build trust between her and Odysseus. However, Odysseus realized that the goddess wanted to go to bed with him, not to build trust, and as a result, Odysseus used his cunning to ask Circe to make a deal in which Circe had to swear to reverse her spell on his men in trade for him to make love with her "as to build trust". The goddess accepted the deal because both sides would get what they want—Circe would go to bed with Odysseus, the goddess would reverse her spell on Odysseus men. Odysseus's intelligence enable him to save his men. His actions showed the quality of a hero who possesses the most important trait according to the Greek tradition—intelligence. □The Greek required that courage was a trait that all heroes need. Courage was defined in the Greek tradition as to conquer fear or despair in order to save oneself or others. Courage was vital to the characteristic of all heroes because there would be inevitable situations where courage would be needed. Odysseus possesses courage throughout his journey home. When he asked Circe about what lay ahead in his journey home, Circe replied "There here lay are a pair of cliffs. One of them with its jagged peak reaches up to the spreading sky, wreathed in dark cloud that never parts. Halfway up the cliff is a murky cave, facing north-west to Erebus, and doubtless it is past this, Odysseus, that you and your men will steer your vessel. A strong man's arrow shot from a ship below not reach the recesses of that cave. Inside lives Scylla, yelling hideously; her voice is no deeper than a young puppy's, but she herself is a fearsome monster. God or man, no one could look on her in joy. Her legs—and there are twelve—are like great tentacles, unjointed, and upon her serpent necks are borne six heads like nightmares of ferocity, with triple serried of rows of fangs and deep gullets of black death. No seaman ever, in any vessel can claim to have passed her without loss or grief; she takes, from every ship, one man for every gullet." Odysseus asked her again, "Only instruct me, goddess, if you will, how if possible, can I fight off Scylla when she raids my crew?" After Circe told him how horrible Scylla was, and that no ship of mortal men had ever passed Scylla unharmed, and yet Odysseus asked how to fight Scylla. Odysseus asked how to fight the monster that no one have passes it without loss and grief because this monster would bring death to his men. Odysseus wanted to save his men from horrible deaths and asked how to fight this monster. He showed courage. Those actions fit the criteria of a hero who posed unyielding courage as defined in the Greek tradition of heroism. □Throughout the epic, Odysseus was a hero. He had indeed pre-eminent qualities and much that were beyond the capacity of normal men. It was when problems come that these heroic traits emerged. When his men asked Odysseus to steal the goods from the Cyclops, which break the rule of Guest/Host relationship, he refused. He showed that he always obey the rules laid down by the immortals. When his men were turned into swine by the goddess Circe, he made Circe swear to reverse her action in trade for him to make love to her. He showed cunning. When Circe told him about Scylla and her unforgiving power, he asked how to fight Scylla to help his men avoid horrible deaths. He showed courage. We know him less from what he thought, which was seldom revealed, than by what he says and did, and his actions follow naturally from his characteristics. If the cunning of Odysseus is mentioned more than his courage, it was his courage that gets him into the scrapes from which his cunning had to deliver him. Odysseus had all the qualities that the Greek tradition required of all heroes, which were obey the rules of gods, possess intelligence, and displayed courage. He was a hero. □ □ □-----

-----heroism invention greeks through first hundreds years their civilization in greek literature already given birth highly polished complex long epics that revolved around heroes these literature works gave many possibilities definition heroism greeks illustrated heroism obey rules laid down gods goddesses those obey rules would gain honor fame greeks regarded intelligence highest gifts that heroes must possess required that heroes must have courage odysseus epic quot odyssey quot standout constantly expected true hero always obey rules laid down immortals possess wisdom courage believed must always guest host relationship rule which guests treat hosts with courtesy host treat guests properly laid down gods goddesses those rule would punished severely odysseus throughout epic demonstrated obeyed guest host relationship rule odysseus always following guest relationship p characteristic have according tradition followed because they would punished immortals recognized when reach land cyclops race decided pick best goods offered gifts headed toward cyclops cave when cheese pens lamb lying racks they pleading quot take these cheeses them stowed come back throw pens make drive kids lambs aboard again good salt water dismissed suggestion wished cave what offered dismissed suggestion choose wait greet cyclops with gifts custom those actions sayings showed following example look actions spoke character possess characteristic meets criteria obeying immortal defined greek tradition true believed intelligence highest intelligence important character because used novel situations where cunning most needed expected tradition displayed when went goddess circe rescue were turned into swine goddess circe goddess spoke your weapon sheath shall mingle make love upon mutual trust come play love asked with beautiful responded circe should make soft dotting here this house turned swine myself hold enticing into your chamber your dangerous take manhood have stripped mount loved upon swear first great oath will work more enchantment harm swore once outright demanded after sworn bound herself entered flawless love asked order build trust between however realized wanted build trust result used cunning deal which swear reverse spell trade build accepted deal because both sides what want reverse spell enable save actions showed quality hero most important trait according greek required courage trait hero need defined conquer fear despair order save oneself others vital characteristic there inevitable situations where needed through journey home asked about what ahead journey home replied there pair cliffs them jagged peak reaches spreading wreathed dark cloud never parts halfway clip murky cave facing north west erebus doubtless past this will steer vessel strong arrow shot from ship below reach recesses inside lives scylla yelping hideously voice deeper young puppy herself fearsome monster could look legs there twelve like great tentacles unjointed upon serpent necks borne heads like nightmares ferocity triple serried rows fangs deep gullets black death seaman ever vessel clam passed without loss grief takes from every ship every gullet again only instruct will possible fight scylla raids crew after told horrible scylla ship mortal ever passed un harmed fight fight monster passes without loss grief this monster bring death wanted save from horrible deaths showed criteria posed unyielding defined greed throughout epic indeed eminent qualities much were beyond capacity normal problems come these heroic traits emerged steal goods which break refused immortals were turned into swine made swore reversed action trade cunning told about unforgiving power help avoid horrible deaths know less thought seldom revealed than says follow naturally characteristics mentioned more than gets scrapes deliver qualities required gods displayed Essay, essays, term paper, term paper, term papers, term papers, book reports, study, college, thesis, dissertation, test answers, free research, book research, study help, download essay, download term papers